

December 5, 2007

I would first like to thank my good friend and colleague from Colorado, Mr. Perlmutter, the sponsor of this

As someone who has worked at the national laboratory, I have spent many years at the laboratory working

New energy technology takes time to develop. It's a long, difficult process, but we have seen tremendous

The experts at NREL have played a critical role in developing a range of technologies that will transform

As our country works to combat climate change and achieve energy independence, NREL's mission is more